Privacy Policy

This website is used to advertise the services of Emphasoft, with a view to you contacting us to explore what services we offer. Additionally, we use the website to collect job applications.

Sales enquiries

There are a number of forms on this website available to contact Emphasoft for sales and information enquiries. Such forms request users' information such as company name, contact information, country and a summary of requirements. There are also phone numbers and email addresses to contact us with. The information you provide us (company name, contact details and requirements) is used to contact you back to understand your requirements. If we successfully contact you back, and there is a realistic chance of working together, we will store the data entered into a CRM system, along with further contact information and any detailed requirements, so that we can keep track of our communications with you. If we cannot contact you back, we will not store the data you provided into our CRM system. Once the work on your project is finished, we may contact you for asking about references or approval of any marketing publication and case study related to your project.

We will periodically review the data and remove it in the event:

a) we lose contact with you or

b) you inform us to remove the data.

We do not add you to any mailing lists or sell or share your data with 3rd parties.

Visitor tracking

We use Google Analytics to check the visitor numbers, referrals and behaviour on this website. This 3rd party service collects your IP address, various pieces of information such as your browser version, any keywords you used to find us, and stores it. It keeps a record of the last few years of website traffic. We do this so we can see general visitor trends and to see the results of advertising campaigns.

Also, we use cookies to know where is a visitor from.

Complaints & questions

Please, contact us with any questions you may have, for complaints, or if you have any data access or removal requests, via email: info@emphasoft.com.
